THE GRAND JURY CHARGES:

COUNT ONE
Title 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d)

THE RACKETEERING ENTERPRISE

At all times relevant to this First Superseding Indictment:

1. Defendants, Mike BUENO, aka Mocho, Eduardo HERNANDEZ, aka Lepo, Arturo RAMIREZ, Jr., aka China, Jose Rolando GONZALEZ, aka Rollie, Ernesto Alonzo RUIZ, aka Gallito, Hipolito GONZALEZ, aka Pollie, Israel GONZALEZ, aka Rayo, Rolando CRUZ, aka Party, Jesus SILVA, aka Bola, Luis Antonio SALDIVAR, aka Flaco, Octavio MUÑIZ, aka Tavo, Joseph Alberto LOPEZ, Margil REYNA, Jr., aka Mikeo, Joshua Omar SANTILLAN, Roberto CORTEZ, aka Robe, Rene VELA, aka Gordo, Carlos DE LA ROSA, aka Charlie, Ernesto SAENZ, aka Tuerto, and Luis Alberto TELLO, aka Wicho, and others were members and associates of a criminal organization known as the Tri-City Bombers whose members and associates engaged in: (a) the illegal trafficking of cocaine, marijuana, methamphetamine and heroin; (b) the laundering of drug proceeds; and (c) acts of violence, including murder, attempted murder, assaults, robberies of other drug traffickers and other crimes within the Southern District of Texas and elsewhere.

2. The Tri-City Bombers criminal organization, including its leadership, members and associates, constituted an “enterprise” as defined by Title 18, United States Code, § 1961(4) (“the Enterprise”), that is, a group of individuals associated in fact that was engaged in and the activities of which affected interstate and foreign commerce. The Enterprise constituted an ongoing organization whose members functioned as a continuing unit for a common purpose of obtaining the objectives of the Enterprise.

3. In the early 1980s, young men from Lopezville, Texas, a small predominately-Hispanic area in the South Texas border area, formed a street football team called the “Lopezville Bombers.” At the same time, young men from the nearby town of Pharr, Texas formed a break dancing group called the “Tri-City Poppers.”

4. In the mid-1980s, the Lopezville Bombers and Tri-City Poppers merged and became the Tri-City Bombers. In the early days of its formation, the Tri-City Bombers would mostly gather and associate for the purpose of playing pickup football games against teams from various nearby cities. Over a period of time, local law enforcement began to notice an increase in fights after these football games and due to the violent altercations the Tri-City Bombers developed a reputation as a tough group of young men.

5. In the late 1980s, the Tri-City Bombers evolved into a gang with a defined leadership structure, colors, tattoos and rules. The Tri-City Bombers organization included titles such as President, Vice-President, General, Captain, Lieutenant, Sergeant, “Carnal” (Brother) and “Prospecto” (Prospect).

6. In the early 1990s, the Tri-City Bombers split into two (2) factions: Tri-City Bombers and the Texas Chicano Brotherhood. The split resulted in a wave of violence in the Tri-City area of Pharr, San Juan and Alamo, Texas.

7. An individual who wanted to become a Tri-City Bombers member was referred to as a “Prospecto.” In order to become a member, the Prospecto had to have a “Padrino” (Godfather) to vouch for him as being worthy of becoming a full-fledged member. Once a “Prospecto” became a member, he was referred to as a “Carnal”.

8. The Tri-City Bombers adopted black and red as its colors. In addition, some members tattooed the following on their bodies: (a) the letters “TCB”; (b) a 1939 Chevy Bomb car; (c) the number “39”; (d) a Cherry bomb; (e) a necklace tattoo made of small bombs; or (f) three high-rise buildings or three-point crown to represent the Tri-City area.

9. The rules of the Tri-City Bombers included, among others: membership for life; brotherhood before anything else; never cooperate with law enforcement; obey orders of superiors; pay a monthly fee to the Enterprise; give 10% of any criminal earnings to the Enterprise; and never disrespect the Tri-City Bombers family.

10. The consequences for violating the rules included severe beating, known as a “disiplina” (discipline), to being “x-out” (marked for murder).

11. The Enterprise had a hierarchy for making decisions. The leaders of the Enterprise had such titles as President, Vice-President, General, Captain, Lieutenant and Sergeant. These leaders determined whether members violated the rules and the punishment for any violation.

12. The Enterprise’s strict set of rules ensured loyalty and participation in criminal activities. It was common for an Enterprise member to demonstrate his loyalty by taking responsibility for a crime in order to shield a member with superior rank from criminal responsibility.

13. The Enterprise members maintained regular communications with their members who were in prison for violent crimes and drug trafficking. Such communications were often through letters or telephone calls. Coded language was used frequently in order to mislead law enforcement officers as to the true message contained in the letters and telephone calls.

14. The Enterprise members maintained regular communications with each other through regular meetings and telephone calls. In communications over cellular telephones the Enterprise members used coded language when they discussed any criminal activity. For instance, when discussing the type of controlled substances, they may have referred to it as “white” (cocaine), “green” (marijuana), “popcorn” (high quality marijuana), and “stuff”; when discussing drug proceeds, they may have referred to it as “paper” or “coin”; when discussing the transportation of controlled substance, they may have referred to it as a “ride” or “trip”; and when referring to a particular city, such as Houston, they may have referred to it as “H” or Donna, Texas, they may have referred to it as “Ghost Town.”

15. The power of the Enterprise was used to create fear and intimidation that shielded its members from criminal responsibility, ensured the timely payment of drug debts and prevented the theft of members’ money or drugs. Violent retribution was an important activity of the Enterprise. Such violent retribution helped enforce loyalty to the Enterprise that was necessary to the smooth running of its criminal activities.

16. Although the Enterprise began in the South Texas area, its members and criminal activities are not bound by that geographical area. In fact, Enterprise members lived across Texas as well as in Georgia, Oklahoma, Missouri, Indiana and South Dakota and other states where they continued to engage in criminal activities.

THE PURPOSES OF THE ENTERPRISE

17. The purposes of the Enterprise included the following:

a. maintaining a powerful organization that protected its members and associates from rival criminal organizations, those disloyal to the Enterprise or those who lost or stole the Enterprise’s controlled substances;

- b. enriching its members and associates through criminal activities which included, the illegal distribution of controlled substances and other criminal acts;
- c. preserving and protecting its power, territory and profits through the use of intimidation, violence and threats of violence; and
- d. keeping rival gangs, potential informants, potential cooperating defendants, witnesses, law enforcement and the public-at-large in fear of the Enterprise through violence and threats of violence.

18. The Enterprise members acted to protect each other and to build a strong organization through intimidation and violence against outsiders and through strict and harsh discipline of its members and associates who violated its rules.

THE DEFENDANTS

19. The Enterprise members and associates had the following roles:

a. Mike BUENO, aka Mocho, held the rank of Captain. BUENO was a leader who coordinated and directed members and associates of the Enterprise in committing home invasion robberies to steal controlled substances as well as being involved in the transportation of large quantities of controlled substances from the Rio Grande Valley of Texas to various cities across the United States. The proceeds from the sale of the controlled substances were transported to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas via vehicles or through financial institutions.

(b) Eduardo HERNANDEZ, aka Lepo, held the rank of Lieutenant. HERNANDEZ was a leader who was involved in the distribution of cocaine locally as well as being involved in the transportation of controlled substances from the Rio Grande Valley of Texas to various cities across the United States. The proceeds from the sale of the controlled substances were transported to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas via vehicles or through financial institutions.

(c) Arturo RAMIREZ, Jr., aka China, held the rank of Sergeant. RAMIREZ was a leader who was involved in the distribution of cocaine, methamphetamine and heroin locally as well as being involved in the transportation of controlled substances from the Rio Grande Valley of Texas to various cities across the United States. The proceeds from the sale of the controlled substances were transported to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas via vehicles or through financial institutions.

(d) Jose Rolando GONZALEZ, aka Rollie, held the rank of Captain. J. GONZALEZ was a leader who has contact with large-scale suppliers of controlled substances; was involved in coordinating the transportation of cocaine, marijuana, methamphetamine and heroin to Atlanta, Georgia, Ft. Wayne, Indiana, St. Louis, Missouri and other cities. J. GONZALEZ also coordinated the movement of the drug proceeds from the sale of the controlled substances back to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

(e) Ernesto Alonzo RUIZ, aka Gallito, held the rank of Sergeant. RUIZ was a leader who was involved in the distribution of controlled substances locally as well as coordinating the transportation of large quantities of marijuana to various cities across the United States. RUIZ also coordinated the movement of the drug proceeds from the sale of the controlled substances back to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

(f) Hipolito GONZALEZ, aka Pollie, was an associate who was involved in the transportation of controlled substances from the Rio Grande Valley of Texas to various cities across the United States. H. GONZALEZ also coordinated the movement of the drug proceeds from the sale of the controlled substances back to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

(g) Israel GONZALEZ, aka Rayo, was a member who was involved in the transportation of controlled substances from the Rio Grande Valley of Texas to various cities across the United States. I. GONZALEZ also coordinated the movement of the drug proceeds from the sale of the controlled substances back to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

(h) Rolando CRUZ, aka Party, was a member who was involved in the transportation of controlled substances from the Rio Grande Valley of Texas to various cities across the United States. CRUZ also coordinated the movement of the drug proceeds from the sale of the controlled substances back to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

(i) Jesus SILVA, aka Bola, held the rank of Sergeant. SILVA was involved in coordinating home invasion robberies to steal controlled substances; sending controlled substances in the mail to various cities across the United States; and coordinating the movement of the drug proceeds through the United States mail back to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

(j) Luis Antonio SALDIVAR, aka Flaco, was an associate who was involved in the distribution of controlled substances and in using financial institutions to launder drug proceeds.

(k) Octavio MUÑIZ, aka Tavo, was a member who was involved in the packaging and loading large quantities of marijuana into load vehicles in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas. MUÑIZ also followed the load vehicles to their final destination where he assisted in the off-loading of the marijuana.

(l) Joseph Alberto LOPEZ was a member who was involved in committing home invasion robberies for the purpose of stealing controlled substances. LOPEZ participated in a home invasion robbery that led to the killing of the home owner.

(m) Margil REYNA, Jr., aka Mikeo, was a member who was involved in committing home invasion robberies for the purpose of stealing controlled substances. REYNA participated in a home invasion robbery that led to the killing of the home owner.

(n) Joshua Omar SANTILLAN was a member who was involved in committing home invasion robberies for the purpose of stealing controlled substances. SANTILLAN participated in a home invasion robbery that led to the killing of the home owner.

(o) Roberto CORTEZ, aka Robe, was an associate who had contact with large scale suppliers of controlled substances. CORTEZ supplied the Enterprise with cocaine, marijuana and methamphetamine and was involved in the transportation of large amounts of marijuana and cocaine to the Atlanta, Georgia area.

(p) Rene VELA, aka Gordo, was an associate who coordinated home invasion robberies for the purpose of stealing controlled substances.

(q) Carlos DE LA ROSA, aka Charlie, was an associate who allowed the use of his property for the purpose of storing, concealing and packaging large quantities of controlled substances.

(r) Ernesto SAENZ, aka Tuerto, was an associate who was involved in following vehicles loaded with controlled substances from the Rio Grande Valley to their final destination for the purpose of scouting for law enforcement.

(s) Luis Alberto TELLO, aka Wicho, was an associate who was involved in committing home invasion robberies for the purpose of stealing controlled substances. TELLO participated in a home invasion robbery that led to the killing of the home owner.
